NOT ONLY DOES IT MAKE CARS, NOW BENTLEY WILL BUILD ITS FIRST RESIDENTIAL TOWER IN MIAMI

Home to the Porsche Design Tower and Aston Martin Residences, Miami will now house the British automaker's first residential tower, Bentley.

Buildings bearing the hallmarks of major automotive brands are becoming increasingly popular, particularly in Miami, home to the Porsche Design Tower and Aston Martin Residences . Now another luxury carmaker is adding its name to that illustrious list: Bentley Motors , which announced it will build a 749-foot-tall building in the Sunny Isles Beach area.

Bentley has partnered with Dezer Development for the project, which will be the British manufacturer's first luxury residential tower.

Dezer's resume includes the Armani / Casa and Porsche towers. He partnered with Sieger Suarez Architects for both projects; the company will also supervise the design of the new construction of the assembly plant.

Of course, you're buying a certifiable Bentley home, not a new Four Seasons rig (though they're great too), so what are some of the automotive advantages?

Bentley Residences Miami

Each of the more than 200 apartments will have a multi-car garage in the unit, so your prized brand can be stored in your own residence, rather than an oversized community parking lot. A proprietary car lift will get your wheels up quickly to whatever residence you're in (yes, even if it's not a Bentley).

However, the drives are more than just a great place to store your car. Each home will also have its own private balcony, pool, sauna, and some even an outdoor shower. It is a sight to behold: the building will offer panoramic views of the ocean and the bay. Floor-to-ceiling windows will allow residents to enjoy it all, even from the inside.

Outside of your condo, shared amenities include a gym, pool, spa, restaurant, lounge, cabanas, movie theater, whiskey bar, and landscaped garden.

Bentley Residences Miami will be built in accordance with Florida Green Building Council certifications; the hope is that, in this way, the building consumes less energy and has a minimal impact on the environment.

But don't get too excited, because it hasn't been built yet. Construction is estimated to begin in 2023 and is scheduled for completion in 2026. In the meantime, interested buyers can visit bentleyresidencesmiami.com for more information.
